The Rockefeller Foundation

Since its founding in 1913, The Rockefeller Foundation has brought people together around the globe to try to solve the world's most challenging problems and promote the well-being of humanity. Today, in a world capable of so much, it is unacceptable that there are still so many with so little. That's why The Rockefeller Foundation fights to secure the fundamentals of human well-being—health, food, energy, jobs—so they're within reach for everyone, everywhere in the world. Their approach is grounded in what they've seen work over more than a century: It's inspired by science, rigorous about data, brings together and empowers others, and is focused on real results that improve people's lives.
